lapis làpis s. m. [dal lat. lapis «pietra»]

Lapis, “stone” in latin, draws its inspiration from a newly discovered vein of Tuscan travertine which is perfectly in step with the times. Gone is the old look of traditional cross-cut travertine – this new quarry yields a surface with a soft and natural pebble effect, perfect for those seeking a terrazzo look but in reality need something warmer, enveloping, and that won’t tire once the fad is over.

Lapis, «pierre» en latin, s’inspire d’une veine de travertin toscan récemment découvert et parfaitement dans l’air du temps. Fini l’ancien aspect du travertin traditionnel à coupe croisée - cette nouvelle carrière produit une surface à l’effet caillouteux doux et naturel, parfaite pour ceux qui recherchent un effet terrasse mais qui ont besoin de quelque chose de plus chaud, enveloppant, et qui ne fatiguera pas un une fois la mode passée.

Lapis, “Stein” auf Latein, ist von einer kürzlich entdeckten Ader aus toskanischem Travertin inspiriert, die völlig im Einklang mit der Zeit ist. Die alte Optik des traditionell quer geschnittenen Travertins ist nun vorbei: dieser neue Steinbruch erzeugt eine Oberfläche mit einem weichen und natürlichen Kieseffekt, perfekt für diejenigen, die ein Terrazzo-Aussehen suchen, aber in Wirklichkeit etwas Wärmeres, Umhüllenderes brauchen, das nicht müde machen wird, wenn der Trend vorbei ist.

Lapis, “pietra” in latino, si ispira a una vena di travertino toscano scoperta di recente e assolutamente al passo con i tempi. Il vecchio look del travertino tradizionale tagliato in falda è ormai superato. Questa nuova cava crea una superficie con un effetto ciottolato morbido e naturale, è perfetto per chi cerca un look da terrazzo ma dai toni più caldi e avvolgenti, che non passi mai di moda.
